INTRODUCTION

Today the society is winding up increasingly complex in its working. The prime trademark of the present world is the survival of the fittest. This has expanded the quantity of defenseless, denied and hindered. Here social work has a noteworthy part to play. Social work use assets to deal with the issues of such individuals and attempt to enhance and ease their torment and enduring. Social workers endeavor to avoid social issues caused by destitution, joblessness, insufficient health and training office, liquor addiction, tranquilize manhandle and so forth.

Professional social work is centered around critical thinking and change. In that capacity, social workers are change operators in society and in the lives of the people, families and groups they serve. Social work uses an assortment of abilities, systems, and exercises steady with its comprehensive concentrate on people and their surroundings. Social work mediations go from fundamentally individual centered psychosocial procedures to inclusion in social policy, arranging and advancement. A social work instruction gives a hypothetical framework and an arrangement of certifiable aptitudes that gives social workers the adaptability to work in an extensive variety of settings with certainty and capability. One professional domain that social workers are well-readied for is business. Numerous social workers who maintain their own businesses are in private practice. Notwithstanding private practice in mental health, be that as it may, numerous social workers likewise utilize their professional aptitudes for different business ventures. Many have propelled businesses following quite a while of professional practice; some additionally set themselves up through business and administration degrees.

Significant and developing proof demonstrates that mental health and numerous basic mental disorders are molded, as it were, by social, monetary and environmental elements. An audit of worldwide proof by Vikram Patel and partners for the WHO Commission on Social Determinants of Health detailed persuading proof that low financial position is deliberately connected with expanded rates of depression¹. Sexual orientation is likewise imperative, mental disorders are more typical in ladies, they as often as possible experience social, financial and environmental factors in various approaches to men.

Making a move to enhance the states of everyday life from before birth, amid early youth, at school age, amid family building and working ages, and at more established ages gives openings both to enhance populace mental health and diminish the danger of those mental disorders that are related with social disparities. While extensive activity over the life course is required, logical agreement is considerable that giving each youngster the most ideal begin will produce the best societal and mental health benefits.

The commonness and social circulation of mental disorders has been sensibly well recorded in high-wage nations. While there is developing acknowledgment of the issue in low-and center wage nations, a huge hole still exists in research to quantify and portray the issue, and in strategies, policies and projects to avoid mental disorders. There is an impressive need to raise the political, and vital need given to the counteractive action of mental disorders and to the advancement of mental health through activity on the social determinants of health.

The conventional model of healthcare is a therapeutic model, focusing on the historical backdrop of illness, examination concerning the physiological premise of manifestations, and solutions for restore those to typical, trailed by estimation of results. The more extensive wellbeing of the individual encountering illness, and being a patient frequently out of the blue, can be lost inside this model.

PRESENT SCENARIO OF SOCIAL WORK PROFESSION IN INDIA

Social Work as calling in India has just passed its earliest stages long back and over the most recent couple of decades it has risen as a standout amongst the most requesting calling in India. In India a man – holding a Bachelor (BSW) or Master (M.A in Social Work/MSW) degree in Social Work is by and large thought about a professional social worker. To the extent Indian situation is concerned professional social workers can be found in coordinate practice in managerial, administration and policy arranging positions in different Government and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) and in government services. Both Governmental and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) have a considerable measure to offer, in the event that you will work hard and in any given conditions. Worldwide organizations too are socially mindful and consequently various open doors are accessible in global social work. Mechanical and business units too are hoping to enlist social workers. A degree or confirmation in Social Work is making a vast number open doors for the a great many Indian youth in different sectors. Social Work is an extremely huge field and the activity prospects of a social worker isn't particular to a specific field. Social workers manage people, families, organizations and gatherings. They endeavor to limit and anticipate social issues caused by elements, for example, destitution, joblessness, liquor addiction, absence of health services, family maladjustments, physical, mental and enthusiastic impairments, hostile to social conduct and poor lodging. Professionally, Social workers might be named three writes to be specific Macro, Meso and Micro. Full scale social workers manage Social work broadly and universally, by making policies and sponsorships; while Meso workers handle social work with little organizations, offices and gatherings. Miniaturized scale social workers work with people and families. There are sufficient openings for work for MSW degree holders in both the legislature and also non-governmental sectors. Opportunity in the governmental sector is principally in the group improvement ventures relating to health, training, country advancement, youngster, lady and ancestral welfare and so on. Work in NGOs' can be particular to either urban or provincial zone. Postgraduates in Social Work additionally have openings for work in the mechanical and corporate sector. Understudies picking social work as career may discover work in kid welfare and family service offices for giving mental, health, therapeutic, instructive and remedial services.

NEED OF PROFESSIONALS IN VARIOUS SECTORS

Social work became out of compassionate and popularity based standards, and its esteems depend on regard for the balance, worth, and nobility surprisingly. Since its beginnings over a century prior, social work practice has concentrated on addressing human needs and creating human potential. Human rights and social equity fill in as the inspiration and support for social work activity. In solidarity with the individuals who are hindered, the calling endeavors to ease neediness and to free powerless and mistreated individuals keeping in mind the end goal to advance social consideration. Social work calling tends to the boundaries, imbalances and shameful acts that exist in society. Its main goal is to enable individuals to build up their maximum capacity, to advance their lives, and anticipate brokenness. Professional social work is centered on critical thinking and change. Accordingly, social workers are change specialists in society and in the lives of the people, families and groups they serve. Social work uses an assortment of aptitudes, systems, and exercises reliable with its all encompassing spotlight on people and their surroundings. Social work mediations run from essentially individual centered psychosocial procedures to inclusion in social policy, arranging and advancement. A social work training gives a hypothetical framework and an arrangement of genuine abilities that gives social workers the adaptability to work in an extensive variety of settings with certainty and capability. One professional domain that social workers are well-readied for is business. Numerous social workers who maintain their own businesses are in private practice. Notwithstanding private practice in mental health, be that as it may, numerous social workers likewise utilize their professional aptitudes for different business wanders. Many have propelled businesses following quite a while of professional practice; some additionally set themselves up through business and administration degrees.

PSYCHOLOGICAL AND SOCIAL NEEDS

The WHO meaning of health referred to above shows that it isn't just the physical needs of sick patients that need to be tended to yet in addition their psychological, social, otherworldly, and environmental needs. The European Charter on Environment and Health pronounces that 'great health and wellbeing require a spotless and agreeable condition in which physical, psychological, social and tasteful elements are altogether given their due significance'.

No accord exists about the importance and idea of 'need' in health, human science and political writing. The DH characterizes need as 'the necessities of people to empower them to accomplish, keep up or reestablish an adequate level of social freedom or personal satisfaction, as characterized by specific care office or expert'. Notwithstanding the absence of a concurred definition, ideas of need are generally used to characterize methods for regarding patients as individuals, comprehensively. The earth we live in is fundamental to essential human needs as accentuated in Maslow's order of needs. Needs-situated speculations underline the health professional's part in helping the patient to meet his or her physiological and psychosocial needs. Generally health specialists and other health-related organizations at nearby, territorial, and national level set out to give proper services to address populace issues, trying to accomplish levels of health change, an adequate level of social freedom and enhanced personal satisfaction.

Hospitalization presents particular worries well beyond those related with illness. These range from environmental factors, for example, new environment, to the absence of security and freedom and vulnerability about sick health results. At the point when a patient's needs are not met it might influence their enthusiastic state. Ending up physically sick is quite often an upsetting background. The vast majority change well to the limits forced by their illness however a critical extent find that their passionate and social methods for dealing with stress are tested. Physical illness can have significant social and enthusiastic results. Individuals who experience the ill effects of physical illness regularly lose the capacity to play out a scope of exercises which beforehand looked after their 'feeling of themselves', regardless of whether as a parent, supplier or worker. While sparing lives and forestalling physical weakening of health are essential. Psychological and social needs of patients likewise need to be considered and tended to as a piece of all encompassing healthcare conveyance.

EVOLUTION OF FIELD OF MEDICAL SOCIAL WORK

Medical Social Work, which today is viewed as the practice of social work (professional) regarding medication, maybe, had its first obvious indications in India in the organization of hospitals for the debilitated in the Buddhist time frame. The religion of Buddha lays accentuation on the easing of agony as an imperative thing of Buddhist confidence. Subsequently hospitals² for the care of the debilitated were worked in every one of the cloisters of Buddhist India.

The specialists of Ayurveda (arrangement of prescription) realized that body, psyche and soul shape discernable parts of an indistinguishable solidarity. Therefore in their work with the wiped out it is however normal that social and enthusiastic issues of their patients would not have been completely disregarded. In addition, in a society that accentuated the obligations of individuals as opposed to their rights, relatives, companions and neighbors would take an interest in the different territories of care of the wiped out, for example, purchasing drugs, obtaining nutritive eating regimen, talking things over with him to mollify his uneasiness, taking care of his local and work undertakings and remaining by him in his hour of need to give him passionate help. The joint family framework likewise gave security to the incessantly debilitated, the serious and the impaired, for notwithstanding when they were not ready to add to the store of the family they were dealt with by different individuals. Instances of their being left to their destiny would be least.

Before professional medical social workers went ahead the scene, certain parts of their work, e.g. managing passionate and environmental issues of the patient in a less convoluted society than the cutting edge one were dealt with by priests and cloisters. Considerably later, be that as it may, in the nineteenth and twentieth hundreds of years Christian evangelists and the preachers of the Ramkrishna arrange were observed to care for a portion of the passionate and environmental needs of the debilitated well beyond the medical ones either in their own particular medical foundations or others. Subsequently the idea of medical social work has been in our nation from exceptionally antiquated circumstances however the idea of the social worker was not there.

Ayurvedic drug grew impressively in the colleges and hospitals joined to Buddhist cloisters at Pataliputra, Taxila, Sarnath and Nalanda, and so on between the fifth and eleventh Centuries A.D. inspite of attacks of Huns and Scythians. Yet, the most exceedingly bad blows originated from A.D. 1200 when India was presented to a few attacks by nonnatives.

A portion of the religious communities were decimated by the trespassers and numerous priests were murdered or they fled to different parts of the nation and even past. The advance of science and drug for all intents and purposes arrived at an end. There was no security and settled situation and individuals were in steady fear because of attacks of rehashed intrusions. Moreover, some information of psychosomatic disorders with respect to medical professionals drove them to underscore the need for understanding a patient's social and passionate issues. A learning of these zones could be conveyed to them enough by individuals from another teach i.e. social work.

EVOLUTION OF FIELD OF PSYCHIATRIC SOCIAL WORK

Evolution of the field of psychiatric social work is associated with the improvement of psychiatry as a teach. Psychiatry or Bhut vidya⁴ was referred to in antiquated India as a branch of the Ayurveda (art of prescription). With the decay of the Ayurveda by the twelfth Century A.D. Bhut vidya (Indian psychiatry) additionally declined. As Western psychiatry was a late comer in the field of Western prescription it showed up on Indian scene significantly later than (Western) medication for physical illnesses which was step by step brought into this nation with the appearance of the British.

In this setting notice might be made of the Indian Council of Mental Hygiene, an organization established in 1944 with the target of the advancement of mental health. In its prior years of presence when there were not very many foundations or organizations with psychiatric introduction the chamber did some compelling work through its executive who was a specialist in making the Government and general society mindful of the need for different mental health services. Of no less significance around there is the Indian Psychiatric Society the national organization of therapists in this nation found in 1947 on the activity of Dr. Nagendra Nath De, a famous therapist of Calcutta.

The main push to frame a select relationship of therapists in India was made by Dr. Banarasi Das, the Superintendent of Mental Hospital, Agra in 1935. It took full four years for his endeavors to solidify. It was just in 1939 that the primary gathering of the Indian Division of the Royal Medico Psychological Association as the new society was called, was held. This society turned into a loss of the Second World War when no gathering could be held for four sequential years. It was then that Dr. N. N. De looked to resuscitate the national organization of therapists.

The proposals of the Health Survey and Development Committee⁶ with respect to production of mental health organizations as a component of the foundation under the Directorate General of Health Services at the Center and the common Director of Health Services, change of hospitals, foundation of new establishments, arrangement of offices for preparing in mental health for medical men made ready for future work in the field of mental cleanliness.

From what has been expressed so far it is clear that in India as somewhere else medical services had grown sooner than mental health services. Thusly, one would expect that medical social work posts ought to have been made sooner than psychiatric social work posts. Nonetheless, in genuine practice, we find that the principal post in medical social work was made in 1946 in the J. J. Gathering of Hospitals in Bombay while the post of a psychiatric social worker was made in 1937 in the Child Guidance Clinic of the Tata Institute of Social Sciences. Different posts in psychiatric social work were not made preceding Independence in 1947.

Notwithstanding, there are less employment opportunities in psychiatric social work today contrasted with posts in medical social work because of deficiency of mental health foundations.

THE SOCIAL DETERMINANTS OF HEALTH

The social determinants of health are sometimes referred to as the causes of the causes. There are many examples of such determinants including tobacco. While smoking causes ill health and premature death the social determinants are those factors that persuade or encourage individuals to become smokers, and to persist in the smoking habit despite their knowledge of the harm it is doing. These factors are important health inequalities and as well as being causes of the causes of illness may also contribute significantly to poor responses to treatment. A model of the main determinants of health (see Figure 1) highlights some of the key factors determining the health of populations. This model demonstrates that there are layers of influence on health that can be modified to improve health.

The Marmot Review on health inequalities Fair Society, Healthy Lives (February 2010) details the need for social justice, material, psychosocial and political empowerment. Health inequalities are not inevitable and can be significantly reduced. They stem from avoidable inequalities in society: of income, education, employment and neighbourhood circumstances. Inequalities present before birth set the scene for poorer health and other outcomes accumulating throughout the life course. The central tenet of the Marmot Review is that avoidable health inequalities are unfair and putting them right is a matter of social justice.

CONCLUSION

Professional social workers are found in each feature of group life in seniority homes, halfway houses, schools, hospitals, mental health clinics, penitentiaries, partnerships and in various open and private offices that serve people and families in need. Social workers require new levels of understanding and new models of practice on the off chance that they are to contribute successfully toward the determination of social issues that are established in worldwide social, political, and financial substances. At any rate these new models of practice must mirror a comprehension of the transnational idea of the social issues that bring customers, customer gatherings, and different voting public to the consideration of human service workers. They likewise should be grounded on experimental proof and should offer positive direction concerning a scope of social improvement arrangements that can be connected to discrete social needs.

Great mental health is necessary to human health and well being. A man's mental health and numerous normal mental disorders are formed by social, monetary, and physical situations. Hazard factors for some, basic mental disorders are vigorously connected with social imbalances, whereby the more prominent the disparity the higher the disparity in chance. Keeping in mind the end goal to decrease these disparities and diminish the occurrence of mental disorders by and large, it is fundamental that move is made to enhance the states of everyday life, starting before birth and advancing into early youth, more established youth and pre-adulthood, amid family building and working ages, and through to more seasoned age.

Ending an existence course point of view perceives that the impacts that work at each phase of life can influence mental health. Populaces are made powerless by profound established neediness, social disparity and separation. Social game plans and establishments, for example, instruction, social care, and work hugely affect the open doors that enable individuals to pick their own particular course throughout everyday life. Experience of these social courses of action and establishments contrasts massively and their structures and effects are, to a more prominent or lesser degree, affected or alleviated by national and transnational policies.
