Abstract – Ecocriticism is a relatively new theory of dissecting craftsmanship or literature. It is a mind extending theory as it grows our comprehension of the environment. The ecocritics read literature from nature's point of view and think in a bio-driven manner. Ecocriticism is environmental activism that reviews the human nature connection. The present research considers books of Ruskin Bond Nature here do not just fill in as a foundation rather is the entire of the physical environment which has an indistinguishable relationship with mankind when all is said in done. For the author, nature is a baffling substance, a heavenly soul fit for leaving a dependable impact on human beings. The Present Paper display Ruskin bond literature relation and its impact on Ecocriticism

1. INTRODUCTION

Ecocriticism calls for moving perspectives from human-driven interests to biocentric interests. It records a writer's significant relationship with and the boundless impressions that decimation of our ecology has occasioned. The works suitably and adequately accomplish environmental care on the great and significant level. The conditions and characters compensated for lost time in worldly complexities are gradually weaned a long way from the risks of authenticity to prominent thought of nature (Soper, 1995)

The turning of the intriguing magnificence around us is interwoven deliberately into an ecocritical work. An ecocritic has an eye far reaching and entering, a foreknowledge that alerts the perusers about the approaching devastation that man's mercilessness has propositioned. The insightful imperativeness of such writers and their huge breathtaking duty guides us to a wondrous trade of normal and private being changed over into persisting general concerns. The most old ecological bothers and points of view of the day are restored by their virtuoso. Ecocriticism, today, has transformed into a famous articulation inside and without academic circles wherever all through the world focusing on its sensible objective of environmental care. Nevertheless, such works can simply blend one's mind without setting up a tried and true association. It is only the inventive writings of great authors and their excited intrigue that can affect the readers into working up an otherworldly converse with nature. The creative system has even wandered in by seeing 'ecocriticism' as a specific part of feedback. Many poets, novelists and story writers have exhibited a strong abhorrence for the moving tide of present day authenticity and worship of machines by demonstrating their stress and true blue sensitivity through their claim to fame. As Ruskin Bond puts it, 'The ecocritic needs to track environmental musings and depictions wherever they appear to see simply more doubtlessly a common contention which is apparently happening, every now and again part secured, in a significant number of cultural spaces. Most of all, ecocriticism attempts to survey writings and contemplations to the extent their clarity and comfort as responses to environmental cries.

Despite the way that my paper proposes to explore the ecocritical part of Ruskin Bond's various stories he has himself never attempted to have a place with the rich coterie of pleasant ecocritics. It seems like he has never attempted hard to drive home any environmental concerns. Ecocriticism has as of late by chance snuck into the rich surface of his fiery work. The ethical arrangement of social duty and welfare or keeping an eye on ecological concerns scarcely entered his considerations. A craftsman's psychological beautifying agents are in a general sense administered by his underlying formative years and moreover by the spirit of the age. So subjectivity is the natural segment of Bond's ideal and facilitated perfect works of art. His subjectivity has ascended as his quality to drive Readers into a world of verisimilitude. The young Bond's hopeless life was stacked with fights, disasters, dissatisfactions and tragedies yet it was his great confidence that saw him developing a relationship with Nature itself. The brilliant landscape compensated the excited vacuum and bailed him out of his trouble. The individual who familiar him with the enormity of the nature was his father from whom he absorbed love and respect for nature. In the stories as father trees in Dehra, When You Can't Climb Trees Any More, A Job Well Done and Coming Home to Dehra he imagines his father coming back to life through new shoots. The story The Memorial benefit anyway absolutely creative, gives a moving record of his father's passing the internal parts of the earth and repulsive calm spread around, cast a debilitating impact on the boy who could scarcely understand it [2]. Directly nature creates as a mind boggling patching power to scatter his desolation and depression. The guiltless boy imagines avoiding going with the help of nature. Possibly he would form into a tree and break that way! ' If ever I am anchored along these lines, thought the boy, I'll get into the base of a plant and after that I'll transform into a bloom and a while later, may be, a fowl will come and occupy my seed.

Through different young heroes in his stories he surveys the planting trips with his father on the slopes of Dehra. These excursions were adequate to maintain an environmentalist and a phenomenal nature sweetheart. After the stunning passing of his father the plants and trees floated around like a guardian soul. They were the guardians of his soul who saw over his everyday life.

2. REVIEW OF LITERATURE

A Garland of Memories, (2014) [3] The Ecocritics opine that extending populace is exceptionally hazardous for the conservation of the trademark resources. The growing enthusiasm of land as a result of the extending populace empowers the pioneer to cleave down the trees and make the land open, without knowing the outcomes. Along these lines, spreading of deserts, Ecocritics trust, that for the prospering of a non-human life, sizeable diminishment of human populace is basic. In the earlier conditions man saw himself as the bit of nature; now he is the exploiter of nature. This hardness is sure to boomerang on him.

Book of Nature, (2014) [4] Trees ' hold first stress of Bond as it is the persevering wellspring of life. For Bond, ' Tree' is almost associated with immaturity, needing for escort, secure and a managing power. The holy person in The Last Tonga Ride returns to his old fatherly house to reestablish his relationship with the trees. It's very much arranged touch even after the sneak past of various decades revives his heart. He says, "As he climbed, it showed up as though someone was helping me. Imperceptible hands, the hands of a soul in the tree reached me and helped me climbed."As a man he feels his very own self being controlled by its fragile power. In Rain in the Mountains he depicts his sole comradeship with trees. He watches that amid the night the lead of the trees is offbeat; they emanate sound, their appendages cluster unaware, move a little and flex their fingers. He watches them create, tunes in to their insider actualities, quits before their outstretched arms and searches for their approval. The peruser can see the quietness of the trees and also the sparkling and muttering and moving lingo of the tree.

In Bond's life trees have always accepted a basic part. Dehra was a not too bad place for the trees and in the area of grandfather's home there were a couple of trees like litchi, guava, mango, jackfruit and lemon and the old banyan. Some of them were planted by Grandfather and grew up with him. In his childhood he was especially connected to jackfruit tree and the colossal banyan tree. Banyan tree for him was a world in itself, controlled by little savages and broad creepy crawlies, butterflies and squirrels, various flying creatures like gossipy reddening ministers disagreeable mynas, bulbuls, coppersmiths, rowdy groups. For Bond, the Banyan is a greatly amiable and friendliest of each other tree. In the midst of the time of total natural items the banyan tree was the uproarious place on the road. Right when Bond was in Dehra, he used to put a ton of energy sitting in the banyan tree and observing each and every creature.

The tree is continually cool, dull and obscure and Rusty has secured himself in the welcoming home of. The Banyan tree addresses Rusty's present position in his room on the housetop.

The Room of the Roof, (2013)[5] at the night Rusty sits underneath a noteworthy banyan tree behind the house. The tree covers score of flying creatures and squirrels. Corroded listen stealthily the drowsy robot of the bumble bees, the squeaking of the squirrels and the endless fowl talks which causes him to recollect his love for Meena. Like Rusty and Meena, the banyan tree was also the setting place for the Gray Squirrel and the White Rat which was exceptionally unconventional. Bond, being in the sentiment with sounds, interlock nature with love. Bond assumes that love and nature are associated and admire love can be capable just in the environs of nature in like manner; Bond has favored the backwoods as a setting to portray love of Rusty for Meena Kapoor. Furthermore, a trademark atmosphere with sights and sounds inspire the unrealistic temper for Rusty and Meena Kapoor. Bond in his Book of Nature verbalizes that confined to accomplish amicability among nature and humanity is to tune in to the hints of nature. He sees attentively, that the creepy crawlies sing in amicability. Corroded holds this point of view and acknowledges the sounds in the atmosphere.

Forsyth, Timothy, (2015) [6] Bond credits a humanizing attribute to the trees and finds in them an awesome quality. Like Bond has shown banyan tree as a residence many animals and winged creatures in like manner, in Bhagvad Geeta, Krishna takes a gander at the world to a single banyan tree with endless branches in which each one of the kinds of animals, humans and demigods wander.

Bond being the disciple of Hindu religion underpins that, The Hindu idea is that this whole world is a wood. To keep this world as it is we have to keep the world-timberland immaculate. Hinduism depicts everything to the extent holiness and in association with a complete reality. The various parts of this Ultimate Reality are all to be found in the diverse kinds of the physical world like the obsolete Hindu Rishis, Bond too affirms that trees are blessed. He composes, "shade giving trees symbolize the congruity among man and nature, and that our forerunners, in their responsibility to trees, and love for them, evidently exhibited that they perceived what was helpful for them. He expects that trees raisingly affect humans.

3. RESEARCH OBJECTIVES

1. The examination endeavors to comprehend, in the light of Ecosophy how nature can be the best shelter to mankind.
2. The Study manages human nature interconnection in the Ruskin bond novel. The paper attempts to dissect how there is a never falling bond among man and nature in the light of Deep Ecology.
3. The paper indicates how men use to abuse nature and natural resources due to their human-centric nature, how ecocide occurs in a natural environment

4. HUMOUR AND WISDOM

Cleverness and amusingness are the exceptional attributes that God has exhibited on man. The Oxford English Dictionary portrays humor as: that nature of action, talk or composing which energizes redirection, eccentricity, comicality, the workforce of seeing what is mind boggling or occupying or of experiencing it: jocose imaginative energy or treatment of subject According to Wikipedia, "The term 'humor' came to fruition due to humoural drug of early Greeks, "which requested the equilibrium of fluids in the human body, known as entertainment factor, and manages human prosperity and estimations (Fromm & Glotfelty, 2014)." The presence of the atypical or incongruence, with a fantasy to provoke laughing and evokes identifying comprises amusingness. Intelligence, in the stories is energized through words, conditions, considerations and characters that appeal the perusers. Meanwhile in Oxford Dictionary insight is portrayed as:

It is the ability to apply essential knowledge in a cunning way, especially to different conditions from which the knowledge was gotten or the ability to settle on decision in perspective of the blend of knowledge, experience, and intuitive understanding.

"Amusingness offers both a sort of intelligence and techniques for survival in a crippling world. It asks for that we figure with the substances of human nature and the world without crashing and burning into terribleness and discouragement." Psychologist Erik Erikson was of the supposition that, "I can't imagine a savvy old individual who can't laugh. The world is stacked with weird polarities". Also, various insight scientists say the equivalent with respect to a clever individual everything being equal.

Sensible judgments as for life and immediate, must be made when we have knowledge and these extraordinary judgments themselves spill out of good perspectives and characteristics. "Seeing things clearly as they might be, significantly understanding the human/infinite situation, having the ability to manage whatever rises with certifiable sentiments of quietness and a convincing, forgiving, widely inclusive response. Reasonable perspective relies upon gifted rules. Another staggering shrewdness investigator Robert Sternberg in his work it's Not What You Know, But How You Use It: Teaching for Wisdom, considers that "individuals are smart to the extent that they use their knowledge to look for a run of the mill not too bad.

They do all things considered by changing, in their methodologies, their own specific advantages with those of others and those of greater substances, like their school, their community, their nation, even God". It is without a doubt realized that, to acknowledge life we need to develop rational perspective towards life. Nearby the whole of its wonders and questions we ought to be fulfilled about the sum of its dissatisfaction, disturbance, and ludicrousness.

The English writer G. K. Chesterton in his The Spice of Life and Other Essays created that, "humor decreases to be portrayed, and in addition one may state boasts of being indefinable; and it would for the most part be seen as a need in redirection to search for a significance of cleverness" So, instead of describing humor, he associated it with unpretentiousness, which encourages us to see our own specific falls, the opening between what we yearns to be and what we truly are. A coherent sequential literary features that the most superseding theory of interesting thing is one that game plans with such openings, what does not fit the opposing (Fudge, 2014).

The exemplification of outlandishness is manufactured in human affectability. Diverse writers have given grouped implications of cleverness yet in the meantime it is amazingly convoluted to go over a sensible importance of senselessness, as there is definitely not a singular run the show about its introduction, it completely depends on a creator, how he uses it. Analysts have perceived a couple of sorts of amusingness speculations yet underscores only two or three one is the 'mitigation theory', advanced by Freud, which depicts humor as a strategy for lessening weight. Two others are a 'superiority theory' pushed by the seventeenth-century mastermind, Thomas Hobbes, and others, and an 'inadequacy theory' offered by the scholar Robert Solomon.

Diversions lights up man to see things in degree and makes ones see one's circumstance in the world, subsequently, reflecting knowledge of a man. The joy got from diversion and laughing aides us to elegant perception of an exceptional and is careful. Intelligence can be energized through words, considerations, characters and conditions. Further, in case we see we will go over that watchful abstract enunciation which influences Laughing and beguilements.

5. ECOCRITICISM

Ecocriticism as a prepare lays outstanding highlight on the authors who frontal zone nature as a critical bit of their subject and highlight ecocentric estimations of sensible enhancement, total moral commitment, and the instances of the world past ourselves, that is, the non-mindful, the non-human world. The term is the youngest of the revisionist developments that got energy due to the spreading out environmental crisis, administers the participation's among humans and their natural condition. This undertaking has been framing the earth by being an agent of nature (Gandhi, 2014).

To refer to Meera Subramanian:

In the sum of their assortments, these parts outline the world we all in all occupy. They play off one another in a perpetual move of concordance. Be that as it may, human impacts have continuously toppled this natural modify. Today, equipoise among the segments is disintegrating, and if these ecological troubles are not individuals and untamed life will continue enduring. India has transformed into the organizing ground for a preliminary in human survival

Ruskin Bond manufactures nature by using joining legends, experience, fantasies and history to reveal human collaboration with the non-human world. It moreover makes an undertaking to find his perceptive duty with thought in regards to moving toward calamity of the worldwide condition. Ecocritical approaches make examination concerning the relationship among nature and human culture and it moreover observes at what minute the creators address its possessions. The whole of the ecosphere where energy, matter and contemplations go to collaboration is the commence of ecocriticism in the social world.

Ecological irregularity impacts human wellbeing in different ways, both unequivocally and unfavorably. It is the stress of every nation to reestablish the diminishing variables of one another and their condition, which incapacitates human creatures the most. Toward the start of the new thousand years, the whole globe is standing up to honest to goodness ecological crisis.

The most sincere issues like a dangerous atmospheric deviation, ceaseless resource need, rain woods obliteration, and species The End of Nature, that a worldwide temperature alteration has brought the probability of this unadulterated state changing the climate, we make each spot on earth man-made and counterfeit.

Ecocritics have a basic part to play in the confirmation of nature. Ruskin Bond as a resentful and concerned writer includes the issues of condition. His short stories exhibit his insatiable love for nature, trees, the mountains and the verdure of the Himalayas. Closeness with the Himalayas has favored him with celestial knowledge. Each question is a strand in the web of life, and every single one of them is as basic as the other. The sustenance of the whole is liable to the normal co-movement among the parts of the aggregate (Ganga, 2016).

Sympathy must be the withstanding rule of life. Need to see the innate estimation of each and every living being. Association, assorted variety, flexibility. Each individual must feel a sentiment of having a place, of connectedness, to the universe all things considered, with the objective that ecological care ends up significant in its most significant substance. What one must go for is the establishment of a corporate society in which the bliss, not of the individual, yet rather of the overall population all things considered, is more objective. This will go far in sparing the web of life perfect.

His short stories manage different parts of district from natural magnificence to late environmental defilement. Ecological lopsidedness and environmental debasement has transformed into a subject of unprecedented stress in today and the need of incredible significance is that humans should grasp and in addition find a response for this extensive worldwide ecological crisis. H.J. McCloskey in his book Ecological Ethics and Politics a crisis that undermines not simply the personal fulfillment to be had a great time by human creatures yet the plain survival of the human race; that ecology reveals that Homo sapiens are, or are in danger of transforming into, a jeopardized species; and itself and for its individuals, including humanity (Hawkins, 2015).

Love of nature and stress for ecological awkwardness in the slopes impacts Ruskin to bond inauspicious as he sees the felling of trees and the brisk deforestation continuing surrounding him. Deforestation is almost trailed by fast urbanization making hurt the earth and influencing ecological vitality of trees to keep up ecological to change and demolish the nonappearance of understanding towards nature.

6. CONCLUSION

Bond's short stories, portrayed by its direct language, rich origination and huge significance, are by and large invited by readers. In any case, standard readers and intellectuals simply see that his stories mirror a particular relationship between human beings and nature, anyway they disregard to figure out what relationship it is, also the writer's ecological awareness construed in the stories. Everything considered, in such an ecological emergency ridden time, it is sensibly essential to separate Frost's ecological awareness, as he is still for the most part read even today. 'Copperfield in the Jungle', 'No space for a Leopard', and 'Buildup on the Mountain' are about the significant chain of being which ties man and nature, as in the chain of biological community, showing association and completeness which underlines on the ecofriendly, and agreeable relationship among man and nature. In the present time, we are vexed neglecting all material movement in light of the way that "the world is exorbitantly with us" and the objects of nature don't contact our heart. Nature should be acknowledged as a guide and instructor since, "One inspiration from vernal wood, can demonstrate to you a more noteworthy measure of man (Christoph, 2014). An extensive part of us regard the earth to be just a hover of shake with a thin layer of air, water and life covering its surface. However, our begetters contemplated science and rationality as one and kept up concordance between both to defend nature. In any case, continuously and a tiny bit at a time this warm association dismissed stained and science from overpowering the earth. This despicable state of the environment, developed the wisdom of the writers which affected them to comprehend that 'Gaia' isn't to be subdivided rather it is to be pruned. At present, the entire world has ended up being worldwide village, we are living in the brisk moving, modernized society.

FUTURE SCOPE OF THE RESEARCH

The future scope of Bond's short stories, described by its straightforward language, graceful origination and significant importance, are generally welcomed by readers. Notwithstanding, conventional readers and pundits just notice that his stories reflect a specific relationship between human beings and nature, however they neglect to indicate what relationship it is, not to mention the writer's ecological consciousness inferred in the stories. In reality, in such an ecological-crisis-ridden time, it is practically noteworthy to break down Frost's ecological consciousness.
